How Southern People Tell You to Mind Your Own Business

- Don't you have laundry to fold or a husband to annoy?
- Baby, keep your nose in your own beehive & you won't get stung.
- Unless your name is on my bills, your opinion ain't got no weight.
- Why don't you go rearrange your spice rack or something?
- Your plate must be real empty if you got time to worry about what's on mine.
- Unless you're buying the groceries, stay out of my kitchen.
- Ain't you got a casserole to burn or something?
- You sure do keep up with my life a lot for somebody who don't contribute to it.

How Southern People Tell You to Hush!

- If I wanted all this noise, I'd crank up the tractor.
- You ever think maybe God made you talkative as a test for the rest of us?
- My heavens, you could talk the horns off a billy goat.
- Why use 500 words to say nothing?
- I want you to say that again and slower this time, so you can hear how dumb it sounds.
- Somebody come shove a biscuit in this woman's mouth.
- You talking just to hear yourself rattle, or is there a point coming soon?
- You ever get tired of hearing yourself or is that just us?
- You're real loud for someone who's rarely right.
- You're talking like there's a prize at the end.

When you don't want Mommy out of your reach, sacrifices must be made.
