Ground Hog Day Was a Bust!

After two weeks of ice and snow, we are all ready to kill the little rodent if he sees his shadow. We know he doesn't actually predict the weather & that the entire thing is scripted weeks in advance, but it's fun to have a glorified rat to blame for the cold weather.

Since we usually get ice, snow is a treat. Our normal snow starts around 3 am and has melted by noon. It gets us a day off from school or work and is over by lunch time. We don't have sleds, but we get very creative. Cookie sheets & trash can lids—even cardboard in a pinch. And we don't lose our electricity. That's the best part.

Ice is our usual winter weather. It's not fun, but we do know how to handle it. Our pick-up truck brigade comes out to remove all the trees so the linemen can get electricity restored. I still say that's why Nashville has been down so long. They don't have enough good ol' boys with chainsaws. Thanks, guys!

Last week's Ground Hog Day
Memes...in case you missed them.

Listen, I'm not falling for that Groundhog Day BS anymore. We can't predict Spring, and we aren't scared of our shadows.

And my name is THEO.
That guy, Punxsutawney Phil?
He's paid to pretend to be afraid of his shadow. It's all rigged. BTW, Phil smokes weed and cheats on his wife. Just saying.

LISTEN UP GROUNDHOG. TOMORROW IS THE DAY. YOU GET THINGS TURNED AROUND NOW OR WE'RE PUTTING CEMENT SHOES ON YOUR FEET AND FEEDING YOU TO THE SHARKS.

This is Punxsutawney Phil's ex-wife, Phyllis, who now lives in Florida and said that Phil is a compulsive liar.

This is the Italian groundhog...when they asked him if he saw his shadow he said "I didn't see nothin."

WE'RE OUT OF PATIENCE,
GROUNDHOG!
GET IT RIGHT...
OR THE SQUIRREL
TAKES OVER!
