June 20th—The Longest Day

This is a weird week. There are some bizarre things “celebrated” this week. I’m not sure why there are so many “naked” activities on the list. Maybe it’s because it’s so very hot! Regardless of the reason, I will not be celebrating any of them.

The one thing I will enjoy celebrating is the longest day. There are many days that feel long for different reasons. When your child is teething & nothing seems to give them relief, that can be an extremely long day or week or month (and probably many nights, as well). Maybe you’re sitting in an extremely boring meeting—yuck! Why is it that some days seem to fly by and others seem to last forever?

Time is a strange thing. I’ll tell Hubby about something that felt like it happened “recently” & then I’ll check the calendar & it was actually several weeks or even months ago. I know time “flies” when you’re having fun, but why does it seem to drag when you’re not?

It’s all about perspective.

Our grandkids are never told we’re coming to visit until we’re on the way.

To them a week feels like an eternity. The constant questions about time are difficult for toddlers and even worse for their parents. Perspective!

Zechariah probably felt like 9 months was a terribly long time when he could not speak before John was born. His wife, Elizabeth, may have found having a quiet husband to only last a short time. Perspective.

The Revelation of John uses the word soon a lot when talking about when Jesus will come again. John wrote those words over 2,000 years ago. Soon? Perspective.

I’ve read that to the Creator of the Universe “a thousand years is but a day.” His perspective is different from ours. To God, it probably does feel like He rescued Noah “recently.”

“He who testifies to these things says, ‘Yes, I am coming soon.’ Amen. Come, Lord Jesus.” ~ Revelation 22:20 (NIV)

When will Jesus come? Soon. Perspective.

Now for the important stuff.
