Sweet September Memories

There's so much happening in the world this week! As much fun as Cow Chip Throwing Days sounds, I much prefer National Waffle Week. My dad made the best waffles on the planet! When the kids were little, we would go to my parents' house on Saturday mornings—still in jammies—& have breakfast. Dad called it Billy's Breakfast Bar. Sometimes he made French Toast, or eggs, bacon, & homemade biscuits, but my personal favorite were his tasty waffles! He made his own batter, sometimes adding the berries in season. And don't forget the toppings! Powdered sugar, chocolate sauce, homemade jam, whatever the kids requested, magically appeared. Sweet memories.

Things That Made Me Laugh This Week

- If my body is ever found dead on a jogging trail, just know I was murdered elsewhere & dumped there.
- Salt of the earth. Sometimes a little salty.
- My body is a temple currently under construction.
- Running the race at a very slow jog.
- Proverbs 31 woman running on grace & dry shampoo.
- My cup runneth over, and I spilled it again.
- Children are a blessing—a very loud, very sticky blessing.
- Marriage—an endless sleepover with your favorite weirdo.
- Grace: biting your tongue instead of saying, “I told you so.”
- Commitment: loving him even when he loads the dishwasher wrong.
- Killing them with kindness is taking longer than I expected.
- I think a lot of my problems would be solved if I had a dragon.
- Why are there never any good side effects? Just once, I’d like to read a medication bottle & see “may cause extreme sexiness”.
- If she’s 5’4” or under, she will mess you up! It’s all the pent-up frustration from never being able to reach things on the top shelf.
- Lord, thank you for my teaching job, but if winning the lottery is in your plans for me, I am here and ready.

Rules of Gen-X Women

- Our tolerance for stupid people left the building with our hormones.
 - People who chew too loudly should eat somewhere else.
 - “No” is a complete sentence.
 - If we sit down after 8 pm, it’s game over.
 - Once the bra comes off, we’re not leaving the house.
 - If it’s not written down, it doesn’t exist.
 - Comfort wins over fashion every single time. Bonus if it’s both!
 - Tweezers in the car = necessity.
 - Life is too short to care what “Karen” thinks.
 - You can only hurt my feelings if I care what you think. Trust me. I don’t care.
 - Drama that has nothing to do with me. Sounds like a you problem.
 - I’m not tired. I just don’t want to do anything.
 - I don’t answer calls. I screen them like a detective.
 - If my grandkids call (or better yet Facetime), I will answer that call!
 - The guy behind me honked because I was going 45 in a 45, so now we’re both going 35.
- Welcome to menopause, Kevin.
